About The Third Court of Appeals

The Third Court is one of the most important courts in Texas. The Court hears civil and criminal appeals from 24 counties, and has the final say in nearly all of those cases. Because the Court is located in our state capital, it also hears most of the appeals involving state agencies, officials and regulations. As a result, the Third Court decides legal issues that affect every Texan, every day.

In recent years, the Third Court has had the worst backlog of any appellate court in Texas. Kurt Kuhn is committed to ending the Third Court's backlog by working tirelessly, applying the law evenhandedly, and never forgetting the importance of each and every case.
